Christmas parade lights up Lively

The Upper Lancaster Volunteer Fire Department held its annual Christmas parade Sunday evening. The parade was followed by a community gathering at the new firehouse with Santa. The Lively Community Association read the names of those who were honored or remembered by the purchase of lights on the Tree of Lights at Mary Ball and White Chapel roads. Santa pictures will appear next week in the Christmas edition.

The Tides Inn float was a crowd pleaser.

Developer outlines residential complex for Kilmarnock commission members

by Alex Haseltine

KILMARNOCK—Mel Benhoff, the managing member of Northern Neck Properties LLC, addressed the Kilmarnock Planning Commission last Tuesday regarding a proposed development called Kilmarnock Glen.

The 427-unit development would be on a 112-acre tract of land within the town limits. One entrance would be on Irvington Road, adjacent to a property owned by Edward J. Davis. Additional entrances are proposed on School Street adjacent to Lancaster Middle School and the Lancashire Convalescent and Rehabilitation Center.

Benhoff said the development would be targeted to accommodate retirees and provide walking access to the town's Steeple's district.

Zachary Lette of Land Planning & Design Associates spoke on behalf of the development firm, describing the architecture of the individual units as well as the overall character of the development, which he said would emphasize diversity and walkability.

Lette also outlined potential features of the planned community such as a community center and exercise trails. He said these would be crucial selling points.

The presentation was met with a generally positive response from commission members, including Steve Bonner, who told Benhoff he looked forward to working with him on the project.

The town council's liaison to the commission, Gary L. Anderson, expressed concern that the town's water and sewer infrastructure might not be equipped to handle such a large development.

Anderson chairs the town's water and sewer committee. He said there are ongoing efforts to identify and address problem areas with the existing system, and until the completion of the current study, the commission would be unable to give the project approval, tacit or otherwise.

"Until we get a handle on this, we don't really know what we can service," said Anderson.

Benhoff said he plans to formally present the proposal to the commission at its February meeting, in hopes of bringing the necessary re-zoning request before the town council in March.

Council lacks quorum for December session

by Alex Haseltine

IRVINGTON—The town council was without a quorum last Thursday when the brief meeting consisted primarily of announcements and updates on ongoing projects. Two expedites were approved.

Only three council members — Gene Edmonds, Kathleen Pollard and Robert Westbrook — and Mayor Alex Fleet were present.

Mayor Fleet announced that Christmas decorations in Irvington will be judged December 22 and that the Christmas Eve celebration under the town tree will begin at 6 p.m.

Town manager Bob Hardesty informed council that plans to place signs asking motorists to "please slow down and enjoy our town" were indefinitely delayed, due to an inability to obtain the necessary permission from Virginia Department of Transportation.

Edmonds suggested that an alternative would be to paint "slow down" on the street at either end of town on Route

Single-vehicle accident claims life of teenager

KILMARNOCK — A Christchurch School student was killed Friday night in a one-vehicle accident on Bluff Point Road about a half-mile west of Prentice Creek Road in Northumberland County.

Ryan Mitchell Wilcox, 17, of Kilmarnock was pronounced dead at the scene. Virginia State Police said the accident occurred around 9 p.m. A preliminary investigation by police found that Wilcox was traveling east on Bluff Point Road when he lost control of his 1998 GMC Sierra pickup truck and swerved off the road and hit a tree. He was not wearing a seatbelt, according to police.

"The vehicle appeared to swerve to the right side of the road. It clipped a mailbox and then veered back across the roadway and went off the left side of the road and hit the tree," said Trooper Troy Smith.

The son of Kyle and Kenneth Bransford of Kilmarnock, Wilcox was an eleventh-grade student at Christchurch School in Middlesex County.

The accident remains under investigation.

Police Reports

Lancaster County Sheriff Ronnie Crockett brought charges against seven individuals last week. Lt. E.T. Self, chief investigator for the Lancaster sheriff's office, brought charges against one individual.

Lt. Self on December 9 charged Travis Shawn Moore, 21, of Farnham with first degree murder, burglary with the intent to commit a felony and use of a firearm in commission of a felony.

A search for Moore began after sheriff's deputies and officers of the Kilmarnock Police Department (KPD) responded to a shooting call in the 100 block of Gemini Road, off of Fleets Bay Road, at about 10:30 p.m. December 9.

According to Sheriff Crockett, Moore broke into the home of Jessica Pittman and shot William Scott Hubbard, 23, of Lanexa. Hubbard was transported to Rappahannock General Hospital where he died shortly before midnight. (See obituary on page B3.)

Based on witness information, Moore fled the area in a pickup truck. Virginia State Police (VSP) Trooper John L. Lewis obtained information that Moore was operating a 1988 Nissan truck and that he may be armed with three firearms. Because all local sheriff's offices and area police were promptly notified as information developed, Deputy McCormack of the Essex County Sheriff's Office apprehended

Moore at about 12:45 a.m. Moore appeared in Lancaster General District Court at 9 a.m. December 10 to determine his legal counsel and the case was set for a preliminary hearing January 21 at 9 a.m.

The preliminary cause of Hubbard's death is multiple gun shot wounds; the final autopsy report from the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner will not be available for several weeks.

In another felony case, Volanta R. Thompson, 24, of Brent Court was charged December 12 with manufacture/sale/possession with intent to distribute narcotics.

Misdemeanors

A Merry Point Road man, 29, was charged December 8 with drunk driving.

A Harvey Lane man, 32, was charged December 8 with violation of probation.

A Wilson Lane woman, 26, was charged December 9 with curse and abuse in Essex County.

A Kinlock Avenue man, 22, was charged December 9 with contempt of court.

An Ocran Road man, 38, was charged December 10 with contempt of court.

A Campbell Road woman, 22, was charged December 13 with contempt of court.

Eagle returns home for the holidays

by Alex Haseltine

WARSAW—A rehabilitated bald eagle was released back into the wild last Thursday after six months of treatment by veterinarians and biologists.

The rescue and rehabilitation of the mature bird was a collaborative effort of several agencies, including the Wildlife Center of Virginia in Waynesboro and the Rappahannock River Valley National Wildlife Refuge near Warsaw.

The bird was initially rescued May 6 by Francis Murphey of the refuge staff after she received a call from Farnham resident Mark Flessner. Flessner noticed the injured eagle was being taunted by crows in the brush near his home off Laurel Grove Road.

Flessner attempted to keep the circling crows from the eagle while he waited for wildlife personnel to arrive.

"I kept my hands up, like Moses and the Israelites, and it kept the crows away," he said.

Despite a lack of formal training in biology or veterinary sciences, Murphey rushed to the aid of the bird immediately after receiving the call, according to Pam Hall, who assisted in the rescue effort.

"It is so typical of the Fish and Wildlife Service that an administrative person who is not a biologist will jump in their car and go save an animal. She [Murphey] is really amazing," said Hall. "By the time we got out here, there were crows after it. It was emaciated and dehydrated."

After spending the night at the local Wild Bunch Wildlife Rehabilitation refuge, the eagle was transferred to the custody of Dr. David McRuer, director of veterinary services for the Wildlife Center.

The bird underwent a physical exam, blood work and x-rays before being diagnosed with a coracoid fracture, which McRuer compared to a collarbone fracture in humans.

"This bone essentially is responsible for making sure that the bird can gain altitude. The eagles that I have seen before with this kind of fracture have usually been hit by a very large transfer truck or train," said McRuer.

Coracoid fractures can't effectively be repaired by surgery, so the bird received "supportive care" which included lots of fluids, food, antibiotics and pain medications. After the bone had healed, the staff began the arduous physical therapy process, re-teaching the bird to fly using its mended wing.

"We actually had to go and exercise the bird on a daily basis to try to build up its strength again, after sitting in a cage for several weeks," said McRuer. "We have a very large 120-foot flight cage for eagles. We have staff members that essentially go into the cage and sort of push the bird back and forth from perch to perch. We have perches on either end. They go back and forth 15-20 times. At that point, if they are showing really good stamina, then they are ready for release."

The bird also underwent a process called "imping" in which damaged flight feathers were replaced with donor feathers taken from another injured eagle that died in captivity. Using glue and slivers of bamboo the donor feathers were aligned and attached, eventually enabling the eagle to fly.

Eagles commonly establish a territory and stay in or around that area for their whole lives, according to Ed Clark, president and founder of the Wildlife Center, who made a special trip from Waynesboro to release the eagle where it was originally rescued.

"We are especially happy to send this bird home for the holidays," said Clark.

Ed Clark prepares to release a rehabilitated bald eagle back into the wild at the Laurel Grove tract of the Rappahannock River Valley National Wildlife Refuge.

Chrismon trees

The first time I ever saw a Chrismon tree was at my college roommate's Lutheran church in Salem in December 1971. I walked into the sanctuary and I couldn't believe how lovely the tree, ornaments and lights beamed in that space. I was eager to go up front to study each ornament, but I admired the tree from the back of the church.

This year I have found several copies of the original pattern book written by Frances Kipp Spencer. She was a talented, creative member of the Lutheran Church of the Ascension in Danville and was struck by the devotion and dedication of the church members who wanted to place a typical decorated tree in her church sanctuary in 1956.

She ignored the gaudy, shiny ornaments at first because she felt that they were out of place in church. (There weren't many choices in 1956.) She thought about her friends and their willingness to do what they could. Then she decided that if she wasn't offering her talent to decorate the tree, the congregation wasn't making a full offering.

The following spring, Mrs. Spencer began to research symbols and monograms of Jesus Christ. She wondered how Mary would decorate a birthday cake for the baby Jesus and what designs would represent Jesus. She handmade a few crosses, a Chi Rho Greek insignia, and decorated a tree in her church nave with a dozen different symbols for Christmas 1957. She wanted to celebrate the birth of the Christ Child and add to the Advent worship service. Her vision was to have tiny white lights and Chrismons, monograms of Christ, in white and gold. The white was to symbolize purity and the gold was to represent majesty. The idea was born over 50 years ago.

Her Lutheran church friends wanted to make more Chrismons for 1958. As visitors came to see the first tree, they asked for the patterns and made white and gold ornaments for their own sanctuaries. All visitors thought it was an excellent way to worship and tell the story of God in simple symbols. Spencer was agreeable to ideas and designs for new and different ornaments, but she was insistent that each church group make the Chrismons by hand and understand what the various symbols meant. Chrismons have never been made in factories and have never been sold in retail stores during the Advent season. That is my favorite feature of this story.

Mrs. Spencer wanted Christians to put their time and love into the creation of these ornaments for their own churches.

Children can make simple stars, crosses, fish and other symbols from white styrofoam. Needle point stitchers can use white fabric and gold threads church members who want to share the lovely handmade white and gold symbols of Jesus Christ produced through the years. Frances Spencer didn't want any denominations to make symbols that would exclude other Christian denominations. So this lovely idea to worship the Lord with Chrismons actually brings us together in our hearts. There is no documentation of a Chrismon tree on Antarctica, but there are trees on the other six continents.

At Irvington Baptist Church there is a Chrismon tree that is always decorated as part of a worship service. A committee of talented members made the ornaments in the late 1980s. The men put the tree up and string the lights. During a worship service the congregation files by and places the symbols of Christ upon the tree while singing a medley of carols. This is especially meaningful, because of late many of the senior citizens do not have a tree in their homes. They get to decorate a tree, have fellowship with friends and celebrate Christ in community and worship.

Call me at 435-1045 and let's see if there might be interest to have a 2009 open church-house tour of the local Chrismon trees so that we can see the handiwork in each sanctuary. Of course, it shouldn't be on Sunday mornings. I'd be glad to have other enthusiasts call me so we could meet and share ideas and designs.

With gratitude to God, Frances Kipp Spencer and to creative Chrismon designers everywhere, I wish you and yours a very Merry Christmas.

to make Chrismons. Beading experts can create crosses and other designs from white pearls, gold beads and wires. Patterns are in the books written by Spencer before her death. Some patterns are more complex for more advanced hobbyists. When a Chrismon tree is decorated and illuminated, it is truly lovely. Praise the Lord.

The Northern Neck has several churches with decorated sanctuaries. If you visit the Kilmarnock United Methodist sanctuary, you'll see a Chrismon tree put up and decorated by

by Audrey Thomasson

Ryan Mitchell Wilcox, 17, of Kilmarnock died December 12, 2008.

Ryan was active in school and community. He was an avid hunter, a leader in his Boy Scout troop and a volunteer fire fighter. He had plans that included college and a military career.

A junior at Christchurch School, he made the Dean's List and was recognized last year as the most improved member of the rowing team. Although slight in build, his position as coxswain required him to bark orders to the much bigger rowers, according to headmaster Jeb Byers.

"He was up to the task," Byers said. "It takes a little person with a big heart to make sure the rowers are in sync. One of Ryan's teammates said he demanded a lot and pushed them very hard, which is why they were so successful."

"Our faculty and students will miss him dearly, and all that he brought to our school life," said Byers. "We have paused many times in small and large gatherings this weekend to remember and also to celebrate Ryan's life. We mourn with Ryan's family and give thanks that he was one of our own."

The school's former dean of students and current director of development, Randal Brown, said he counseled Ryan on joining the Corps of Cadets at Virginia Tech and developing a career in the Army. Brown is a major in the U.S. Army Reserve.

"Ryan had a knack for sticking to a project, whether for the Boy Scouts, volunteering for the fire department or other activities in which he was involved. I have no doubt he would have made a fine military officer," Brown said.

Ryan was a member of Boy Scout Troop 242, serving for the past year as assistant senior patrol leader. According to assistant troop leader Bill Joyner, Ryan was working on his "Life" rank, which is one level below Eagle.

Joyner called Ryan a reliable, well-liked and active member of the scouting program. The Scouts of Troop 242 served as honorary pallbearers at his funeral.

For the past two years, Ryan served as a junior firefighter with the Kilmarnock Volunteer Fire Department (KVFD), laying hoses and assisting with the pump truck during fires and in overhauling the building to make sure the fire was out. On Friday evening, Ryan participated with fellow firemen in the Kilmarnock Christmas parade, riding in tanker #15.

"Ryan didn't miss many fire calls," said Ryan Gordan of the KVFD. "He did whatever you asked him to do even if he didn't know how or was scared—he did it. He was always there and was liked by everyone."

Firefighters paid tribute to the junior member of their fire fighting family at his funeral on Tuesday by carrying his casket atop a fire truck rather than in a hearse, Gordan said.

Ryan is survived by his parents, Kyle and Kenneth Bransford; his grandparents, Kay and Thomas Carroll Somers of White Stone; a brother and sister-in-law, Eric and Molly Bransford of Richmond; a sister and brother-in-law, Bridget and Mark Morgan of High Point, North Carolina; nieces, Caroline and Grace Morgan and Carter Bransford; uncles and aunts, Eric and Margaret Nost and Paul and Beth Somers, all of White Stone, John and Mary Bransford, P. K. and Wenda Bransford, Sean and Karen Malone, Tim and Lynn Bransford, all of Newport News; and two cousins, Laura and Foster Nost.

A funeral service was held Tuesday, December 16, at Kilmarnock United Methodist Church, followed by burial at Woodlawn Cemetery in Kilmarnock. Memorials may be made to the Kilmarnock Volunteer Fire Department, P.O. Box 1295, Kilmarnock, VA 22482 or Christchurch School, Ryan Wilcox Memorial Fund, 49 Seashore Lane, Christchurch, VA 23031.

director at Northumberland High School. He later taught music and was the band director at Colonial Beach and Rustburg. He served as organist at St. Stephen's Church in Heathsille for many years.

He was born September 8, 1909, in Carbondale, Pa., where his father was supervisor of music for the public school system. He began the study of the piano with his mother at age five and later learned to play the trombone. He became a member of the Musicians Union at 14, and after graduating from Carbondale High School played as a theater musician for silent movies and vaudeville. During World War II, he served as a musician with the Army Air Force Band at Langley Field.

After the war, he returned to Carbondale and studied at Scranton University. In September 1948, he succeeded his father as band director at Benjamin Franklin High in Carbondale. In September 1957, he became band director at West Point High school.

In 1942, he married Jeanette Barres of Carbondale, with whom he had two sons, Leon and Carl, and a daughter, Donna Maria. He and his wife were active in various organizations in Heathsille and at St. Francis de Sales Catholic Church in Kilmarnock.

He is best remembered around Heathsille for the miniature circus that he built and often displayed to the delight of young and old in the community.

He is survived by three children, four granddaughters and a great-granddaughter. His granddaughter, Carina Kline, and her daughter, Courtney, still live in Heathsille.

A Mass of the Resurrection will be held at 10 a.m. Thursday, December 18, at St. Francis de Sales Catholic Church. Interment will be in the church cemetery.

Falicia C. Carter

LANCASTER—Falicia Corbin Carter, 76, of Lancaster died December 2, 2008, at Rappahannock General Hospital in Kilmarnock.

Mrs. Carter was born September 11, 1932, to John Elliott Corbin and Mary Alice Wood Corbin. She was the youngest of six children.

She joined Ebenezer Baptist Church in Sharps where she served for many years. She attended Richmond County public schools, graduating from Richmond County High School in 1951. She received a bachelor's from St. Paul's College in Lawrenceville and studied at Virginia Union University. She was an educator in the Lancaster County public schools where she retired after 40 years of service, having taught three generations of some families. She also served several years as principal of the Mollusk Elementary School.

She married the Rev. Paul Elwood Carter August 8, 1959. She took leave from Ebenezer from 1959 to 1984 while serving beside her husband, the pastor of Morning Star Baptist Church, Hartswell Baptist Church and Grant's Hill Baptist Church. When she returned to Ebenezer after her husband's death in 1984, she served for years as the church clerk, a trustee, a member of the Senior Missionary Circle, the organizer and member of the Ebenezer Gospel Chorus, and was a founder of the Corbin Scholarship Fund.

She was a member of the E.C. Bouey Ministers' Wives Association, the Order of the Eastern Star No. 186, the Northern Neck Women's Commission, the Northern Neck Baptist Convention where she served as secretary for over 35 years, the National Education Association, the Virginia Education Association, the Lancaster Education Association, and the Retired Teacher's Association. She received numerous awards and recognitions over the years for her service to the community.

She was predeceased by five sisters and brothers, Inez, David, William, C.J. and Berneita.

She is survived by a son and daughter-in-law, the Rev. Paul Elwood Carter II and Rhonda Carter; a grandson, Johnny Ray Bradley; two sisters-in-law, Corrina Corbin of Warsaw and Rebecca Harris of Hampton; nieces and nephews, Dr. Vera Blake, Diane Brown, Ora Darby, the Rev. John Dunaway, Doretha Johnson, Cecia Seldom, the Rev. Ronald Dunaway, Lloyd Dunaway, Timothy Dunaway, the Rev. Bunnie Dunaway, Mary Sydnor, Alice Gordon, Cornelius Corbin Jr., Evelyn Bowser, the Rev. Calvin Dunaway, Robert Harris, Kevin Harris, and Tonya Harris; many great-nieces and great-nephews; a special "adopted" daughter, Patricia Blagmon of Lancaster; dear friends, many cousins and life-long friends.

Funeral services were held December 6 at the Lancaster High School in Lancaster with pastor Samuel Hackett of Ebenezer Baptist Church officiating and Dr. T.W. Morris, pastor of Shiloh Baptist Church in Burgess as eulogist. Interment was at the Ebenezer Baptist Church. The pallbearers were Brothers of Richmond Lodge No. 65. Her flower bearers were members of the Eastern Star, the Northern Neck Women's Commission and the E.C. Bouey Ministers' Wives.

Berry O. Waddy Funeral Home near Lancaster handled the arrangements.

Phillip Crockett

HEATHSVILLE—Phillip Crockett, 76, of Heathsille died December 11, 2008, at his home.

Mr. Crockett was born April 24, 1932, to Isaac and Columbia Hughlett Crockett in Northumberland County.

He was the 10th of 12 children. He attended Avila Long Grade School and joined Macedonia Baptist Church. He later moved to Baltimore and eventually to New York, where he went into business with his partner, John Cazalet, as Tow C's Transmission Specialist, from 1971 to 1986. Upon selling his business, he returned to Northumberland County in 1986 where he lived the rest of his life. He married Queen E. Myers April 18, 1998.

He is survived by his wife; two sisters, Irma Morris of Baltimore and Marian C. Cooper of Brooklyn, N.Y.; a brother-in-law, Matthew Myers of Philadelphia; two sons and daughters-in-law, Phillip and Beatrice Crockett of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Norman and Carolyn Crockett of Heathsille; four daughters, Kim, Pamela, Beverly and Roysha, all of Philadelphia; special friends, Milton Parker and Bernard Basey; 22 grandchildren; 24 great-grandchildren; many nieces, nephews, other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held December 16 at Macedonia Baptist Church in Heathsille with pastor Kenneth Roiland officiating. Interment was in the church cemetery. The pallbearers were Elvis Rich, Milton Parker, Ray Rich, Dwayne Noel, Shawn Redmond and Lynell Noel. Jimmy Carter was an honorary.

The Berry O. Waddy Funeral Home near Lancaster handled the arrangements.

Come as you are - All Are Welcome

The family of Charles C. English would like to thank everyone for all the prayers, cards, food, phone calls, visits, flowers and acts of kindness shown to our family since his death. Words cannot express how much we appreciate all the love and support we have received throughout this difficult time. We would like to especially thank Pastor Kori Kiss and his wife Anna, Bethany Baptist Church and the staff of Northumberland Elementary School. Our family has truly been blessed with such warm and loving friends in the community. May God bless each and everyone of you.

Kilmarnock celebrates 'A Coastal Christmas'

Gabi Mondy of the Lancaster High School Red Devil Marching Band keeps the beat going.

This Bank of Lancaster entry won the Chamber of Commerce Award for best commercial float in the 30th annual Kilmarnock Christmas parade.

Santa made his annual appearance.

Members of the Lancaster Middle School Red Devil Singers greet the crowd from aboard the Kilmarnock trolley.

Combining the true meaning of Christmas in a nativity scene with some sport fishermen celebrating a coastal Christmas, this Knights of Columbus float won the Grand Marshal's Award. The parade theme was "A Coastal Christmas."

Conservation district wins awards at state conference

The 70th annual meeting of the Virginia Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts (VASWCD) held at the Roanoke Plaza Hotel December 7 through 9 proved to be an award-winning event for the staff and directors of the Northern Neck Soil and Water Conservation District (NNSWCD).

The theme of the event, "Virginia Conservation-Powered by 47 Soil and Water Conservation Districts and Their Partners," emphasized the conservation work being accomplished, highlighting the ongoing support and leadership provided by the many local, regional, state, and national partners that work collaboratively.

Conservation districts were created in the late 1930s. President Franklin D. Roosevelt recognized the need for local involvement in conservation efforts. As a result, the first federal soil conservation law was passed. Today there are more than 3,000 conservation districts in the United States.

Virginia's 47 Soil and Water Conservation Districts (SWCD) cover nearly all the state's land base—all counties, excluding one, and 24 cities. Districts are subdivisions of state government that promote solutions to natural resources issues at the community level by encouraging ing consensus; collaborating efforts of state, federal and local resource agencies; and delivering conservation programs through citizen participation.

A locally elected board of directors governs each conservation district. Just as county supervisors represent the civic and social needs of citizens, districts serve their communities' natural resource concerns.

In Virginia, 325 unpaid volunteer directors serve and direct more than 100 employees to deliver educational programs, provide technical assistance and promote demonstration projects. This network of community-based volunteers and conservation agencies represents an effective statewide partnership attuned to local conservation needs.

The NNSWCD, the eighth Soil and Water District to be formed in the state, began with four farm producers serving as directors in Heathsville in July 1940. In the 1970s, the number was increased to 10. The NNSWCD serves the counties of Lancaster, Northumberland, Richmond, and Westmoreland.

On December 8, the NNSWCD was recognized as the winner of the Area III Outstanding District Challenge, an awards program created to recognize an outstanding SWCD and staff within Area III that consistently goes above and beyond what is expected and to recognize that district's exceptional contributions and accomplishments.

In addition to a trophy, each member of the staff, including district manager Craig Brann, education coordinator Faye Andrushko, office manager Kathy Clarke and conservation specialist Brandon Dillistin, was presented with a cash award.

At an awards banquet December 9, Brann was awarded the Chaffin Soil and Water Conservation District Employee of the Year Award and received a certificate and a cash award. Each year three winners are selected from employees across the state who are nominated based on outstanding technical knowledge; being highly motivated; working well with landowners, citizens, other employees, district directors and associate directors; and promoting conservation through participation as a leader. Funding for the cash awards are donated annually by VASWCD board member and Piedmont SWCD director Dr. Wilkie Chaffin and his wife, Dora.

As the grand finale of the banquet, NNSWCD chairman and VASWCD secretary/treasurer, Junius C. "J.C." Berger was awarded the R.E. "Bobby" Wilkinson Award. The award is given annually to a district director for unselfish and dedicated acts and services that have furthered the effective implementation of the VASWCD's policies and the achievement of its program objectives.

Berger was recognized for his contributions in streamlining the financial management and investment processes of the VASWCD, his successful lobbying efforts, and for spearheading a major statewide software modernization project. In addition to a letter of support submitted by the NNSWCD directors and staff, a letter of recommendation was provided by First District Rep. Robert J. Wittman.

Soybean board prepares for year of challenges and opportunities

The United Soybean Board (USB) recently concluded its annual board meeting. Farmer-leaders elected a new chairman, Chuck Myers, who farms in Lyons, Neb., to lead the soybean checkoff.

"It is an honor to be elected USB chairman by my friends and peers," says Myers. "The members of our board will continue to address challenges facing soybean farmers. Together, we will work to make 2009 a successful year for all U.S. soybean farmers."

Helping Myers lead the board are vice chairman Phil Bradshaw, a soybean farmer of Griggsville, Ill.; secretary Terry Ecker of Elmo, Mo.; treasurer Marc Curtis of Leland, Miss.; Todd Allen, a farmer of West Memphis, Ark.; Lewis Bainbridge of Ethan, S. D.; Jim Call, who farms in Madison, Minn.; Vanessa Kummer, a farmer of Colfax, N. D.; Rick Stern, a farmer of Cream Ridge, N. J.; Jim Stillman, a farmer of Emmetsburg, Iowa; and Ike Boudreux, a farmer of Lebeau, La.

Despite several severe soybean production challenges, many opportunities for profit existed in 2008. According to a recent producer attitudes survey, 74 percent of soybean farmers strongly support the soybean checkoff. Other key accomplishments include:

- U.S. soybean production has grown to nearly 3 billion bushels in 2008 from 1.98 billion bushels in 1991 according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

- Soy exports grew to a record 1.5 billion bushels, or $12 billion in value.

- Soy biodiesel use has grown from 25 million gallons in 2002 to between 650 million and 700 million gallons in 2008, according to the National Biodiesel Board.

"We have a year of opportunity ahead of us and plan to keep building on the partnerships we have with our industry partners," states Myers.

Examples of these partnerships include:

- Expanded use of soy foam in the Ford Motor Company automobile lineup.

- Support of the U.S. poultry and livestock industries, our No. 1 customer.

- Continued partnering with state soybean checkoff boards to build demand for soybean farmers.

- Working with land grant universities to create tools that help identify, manage and protect soybean fields from yield-robbing diseases and pests.

U.S. soybean industry partners, stakeholders and experts recently came together for CONNECTIONS 2008 to decide the issues that are critical to plotting U.S. soy's global positioning strategy for the next three to five years. The top key issues identified included:

- The continued need for research to improve the value of U.S. soybeans.

- Positively telling the story of U.S. soy in a manner consumers will understand and trust.

- The importance of supporting the livestock and poultry industries and maintaining their right to produce in the United States.

Allegations regarding the mismanagement of farmers' checkoff dollars were also brought to the board's attention.

"We are proud our prudent investments of checkoff funds have helped build the domestic and international utilization of U.S. soybeans to nearly 3 billion bushels per year," says Myers. "USB welcomes a USDA Office of Inspector General (OIG) audit of any and all of its operations, contractor operations and projects. Although we will not do so here, we will respond to the OIG with respect to all of the allegations raised by ASA."

To learn more about how USB and the soybean checkoff program operate, visit united-soybean.org, the only official website of USB and the soybean checkoff program.

USB is made up of 68 farmer-directors who oversee the investments of the soybean checkoff on behalf of all U.S. soybean farmers. Checkoff funds are invested in the areas of animal utilization, human utilization, industrial utilization, industry relations, market access and supply. As stipulated in the Soybean Promotion, Research and Consumer Information Act, USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service has oversight responsibilities for USB and the soybean checkoff.

Dorsey Artist Calendars available

Doug Dorsey's real job is in the investment business, but he has always had a passion for watercolor painting.

Beginning in 1989, Dorsey began his Artist Calendar. For the past 20 years, he has created a calendar consisting of 12 watercolor prints of scenes from Virginia and New England. After the months have passed, the calendar is designed so the numbers can be cut off the print so it may be framed.

Dorsey paints in a studio in his Richmond home. He generally uses photos he has taken or that have been sent to him as suggestions.

He is often asked to paint on commission and has for many years donated his art to Northern Neck fund-raising events at the Chesapeake Academy Steamboatin' and The Rotary Club Capin' auctions as well as the fund-raising activities of Saint Catherine's, Saint Christopher's and Collegiate schools in Richmond.

Neck fund-raising events at the Chesapeake Academy Steamboatin' and The Rotary Club Capin' auctions as well as the fund-raising activities of Saint Catherine's, Saint Christopher's and Collegiate schools in Richmond.

His calendars are mostly sold through his website to his many repeat customers, but are also found at Hang Up's in Kilmarnock and Peter Blair on Grove Avenue in Richmond. His website is www.dougdorsey.com.

The calendars are available in two sizes. The 11"X14" full calendar sells for $28 and the desk size 5"X7" is priced at $18. Orders can be sent to Dorsey at his home at 3 Kanawha Road, Richmond, VA 23226 and in the Northern Neck, call 438-6647.

Gov. Kaine creates task force and plan to attract green jobs

Gov. Tim Kaine recently kicked off his Renew Virginia initiative to include legislative and executive actions to make Virginia a leader in energy conservation and efficiency and protecting the environment.

The governor met with his economic development team and energy-related business owners at the Greater Richmond Convention Center to discuss strategies for attracting renewable energy companies to the Commonwealth, and unveiled plans to form an interagency task force and create an energy marketing plan to attract green jobs to the Commonwealth.

"In today's economy, we can turn our energy challenges into an opportunity," Gov. Kaine said. "Our goal is to position the Commonwealth as a leader in alternative energy generation, energy conservation, and research and development. By developing a green energy industry here, we will not only move towards a more environmentally responsible approach to addressing our growing energy needs, but we will also help stimulate Virginia's economy."

As part of the Renew Virginia initiative, the governor announced the following actions:

- Under the leadership of Secretary of Commerce and Trade Patrick O. Gottschalk, an Interagency Task Force for Energy Project Recruitment will work with the Virginia Economic Development Partnership to build Virginia's compelling case for renewable energy-related businesses. The task force will include state agencies, university research centers, and federal laboratories based in Virginia.

- The governor has tasked VEDP with assembling an aggressive marketing plan for promoting Virginia's business case for new investments and employment generating projects in renewable energy production and energy efficiency projects.

- The governor's 2009 legislative package, which will be unveiled in the coming weeks, will improve energy conservation, encourage green businesses to relocate to the Commonwealth, and help create a customer base for those already present.

- Through his roles as chairman of the Chesapeake Bay Executive Council and of the Southern Governor's Association, Gov. Kaine has pledged to work for more aggressive policies for bay cleanup, and to create a dialogue within the Southern States on ways to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and how our natural resources can be an asset for the nation in the area of energy independence.

During their meeting, the governor and his economic development team heard from private sector executives representing 10 leading firms in energy technologies on what Virginia needs to do to position itself as a nationally and internationally recognized state for attracting and growing green energy technologies.

Virginia's Finest, Virginia Grown fit 'COOL' law

Virginia consumers will still be able to find their favorite "Virginia's Finest" and "Virginia Grown" products even with the implementation of the new federal Country of Origin Labeling (COOL) law, according to Barry Bushue, vice president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Bushue spoke to convention delegates and guests December 2 at the Virginia Farm Bureau Federation's 2008 Annual Convention in Hot Springs. "We are pleased that marketing programs such as Virginia Grown are not affected by this rule," Bushue said. State-level programs that identify and promote locally raised commodities are exempt from the federal regulation, he explained.

Producers of more than 600 Virginia's Finest products meet stringent product quality standards in order to use the trademark logo. Thousands of Virginia growers and retailers use the Virginia Grown label to tell consumers their food is safe, fresh and local.

Bushue said Farm Bureau has long supported the new country-of-origin label initiative, believing it would give American farmers more leverage in the grocery store and help American consumers find more locally grown products when they make food purchases.

COOL was first proposed in 2002, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, along with farmers and agribusiness entities, has been working out the details of how to implement the law.

Chesapeake Financial declines TCPP funding

Chesapeake Financial Shares, the parent company of Chesapeake Bank and Chesapeake Investment Group, has announced that it does not intend to apply for an investment from the U.S. Treasury under the Treasury Capital Purchase Program (TCPP).

The program was designed to "encourage U.S. financial institutions to build capital to increase the flow of financing to U.S. businesses and consumers to support the economy," said chairman and chief executive officer Jeffrey M. Szyperski.

"We have chosen not to apply for the TCPP dollars because we don't need them. We have had and still have money to lend to serve the credit needs of our community. Obtaining additional funds in the form of preferred stock from the treasury would not increase our lending. It is not a supply side issue at this point, it's a demand side issue," he said.

"In addition to the fact that we currently have a very strong capital position, very strong loan loss reserves, and are approaching a year with record earnings, we do not feel that taking these funds from the TARP bailout is in the

Music scholarship competition set Feb. 7

The Lancaster, Middlesex and Mathews Lions Clubs are looking for gifted young people in the vocal or instrumental area who would be interested in winning a music scholarship.

The competition will be held February 7 at 2 p.m. at Rappahannock Westminster-Canterbury near Irvington.

A program to benefit and assist youth, the Lions of Virginia Bland Music Scholarship Foundation Inc. (Bland Foundation) was incorporated July 1, 2007, according to Pam Kidwell, Lancaster program chairman. At that time, the program was changed from already existing, ongoing charity foundation. Under the aegis of the Lions organization, the Bland Foundation has been providing performing opportunities as well as scholarships to gifted music students since 1948.

The purpose of the foundation is to promote cultural and educational opportunities for the musically talented young people in Virginia, primarily of high school age, said Kidwell.

James Bland, an African-American, was a popular composer in the late 1800s. In 1948, the Lions of Virginia were instrumental in having Bland's composition "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," adopted as a state song. To honor this prolific writer of Americana, the Bland Program was established.

"Carry Me Back to Old Virginny" is now the state song emeritus and the Lions organization still honors James Bland and his place in American music history through this program.

To register, call Kidwell at 804-436-1905 after 5 p.m., or 435-2850 during the day.

Peace Poster Contest winners recognized by Lions

On November 26, the Lancaster County Lions Club hosted its annual Peace Poster Contest. The theme was "Peace Begins with Me."

Lancaster Middle School students, under the direction of art teacher Marilyn E. Sprouse, designed posters providing them with a better understanding of world peace.

The winners are first, Noah Hook; second, Tarla L. Henderson; and third, Casey M. Clarke.

The first-, second- and third-place winners and their families received a cash award and dinner, compliments of the Lions. The first-place poster has been forwarded to District 24D Lions in Norfolk to compete at a higher level.

The Lions thanked all the middle school students for their participation and especially Marilyn Sprouse for her effort in making this program so successful, said Jim Schmidt.

School and art league to offer Saturday classes

The Rappahannock Art League (RAL) and Chesapeake Academy are collaborating to bring Saturday afternoon art classes to students in Lancaster, Northumberland and Middlesex counties this winter.

Instructor Phil McKenney will teach a four-week workshop on creating comic books and graphic novels for students in grades five to eight on consecutive Saturdays beginning January 17.

The workshop will include the basics of refining ideas, roughing out pages, penciling pages with lettering, and final inking. Students will be exposed to professional work and McKenney will demonstrate drawing techniques. The course is intended to act as a springboard for students to finish their own books.

Invitations were distributed to art teachers at public and private lower and middle schools and home-schooling families. Workshops are $60 per student with a $15 supplies fee. Class size is limited. The RAL offers tuition subsidies on request from students with recommendations from their art teachers.

Instructor Marilyn Sprouse's workshop "Amazing Animals in Art" for first- to fourth-grade students is full.

Call the academy or visit shaughnessy@chesapeakeacademy.org.

Henderson to begin AmeriCorps NCCC tour

Kavey Henderson of Lancaster is one of 12 members of AmeriCorps National Civilian Community Corps (NCCC) heading to Disaster Recovery Centers (DRCs) and holding pre-placement interviews for shelters around Austin, Texas. Henderson and his teammates will be working with the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) until December 19.

While in Texas, the team will be placed in DRCs helping in different areas such as check-ins, processing, pre-placement interviews, animal shelters, and distributing food, water, and supplies. NCCC members will fill maintenance and support roles.

AmeriCorps NCCC is part of AmeriCorps, a network of national service programs created to improve the environment, enhance education, increase public safety, and assist with disaster relief and other unmet human needs.

NCCC members, ages 18 to 24, must complete at least 1,700 hours of service during a 10-month program. In exchange for their service, they receive $4,725 to help pay for college or to pay off school loans.

Other benefits include leadership development, team building skills, increased self-confidence and the satisfaction of knowing that they have made a real difference in communities across the country.

AmeriCorps is administered by the Corporation for National and Community Service. To apply for an AmeriCorps program, call 1-800-942-2677, or visit americorps.gov.

Honor Society helps community

Members of the Lancaster High School Chapter of the National Honor Society have been actively involved in helping the school and community.

This month, the National Honor Society is sponsoring a toy, canned food and clothes drive, as well as an Angel Tree, to benefit local families. To help, please come by Lancaster High School to pick up an Angel. The Angel Tree gifts should be wrapped and returned to the high school by December 18. To drop off new or gently used toys and clothes or canned food items, boxes are in the lobby of the high school and these items should also be dropped off by December 18.

Members of the National Honor Society must complete 20 hours of individual community service per year as well as complete one school service project to fulfill a portion of their requirements for continued membership.

The Honor Society thanked folks for helping them make a difference in the community.

Math project funding

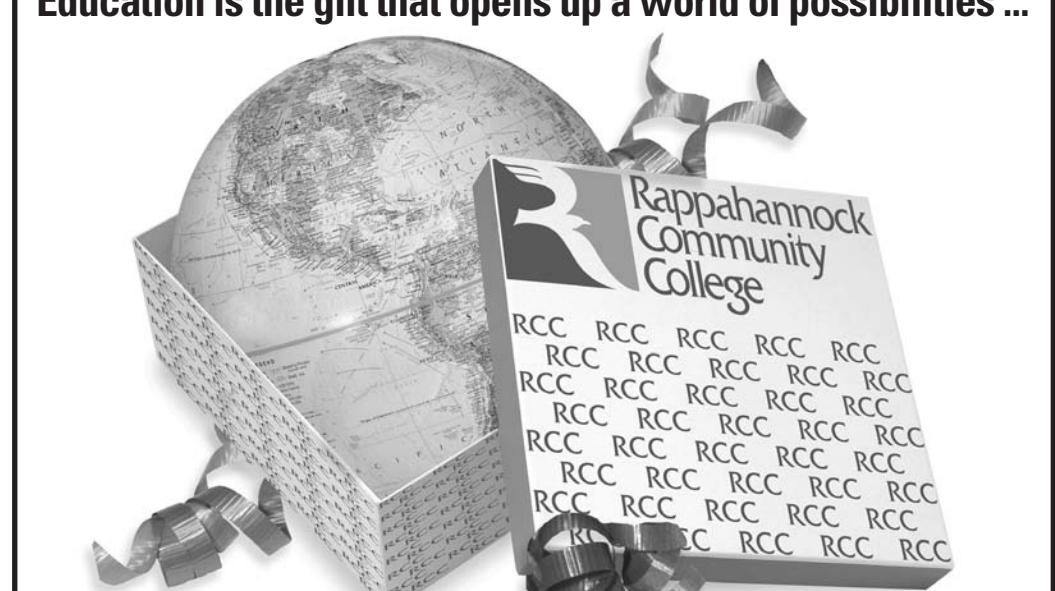

Through a donation from the River Counties Community Foundation, the Lancaster County Virginia Education Foundation (LCVEF) recently provided funding to Lancaster Middle School to research math programs. Tara Booth will lead the research program. From left are superintendent Susan Scibbarra, principal Craig Kauffman, lead math teacher Tara Booth and LCVEF members Bill Hughes and Margaret Socey. Donations to LCVEF are appreciated and should be sent to P.O. Box 928, Kilmarnock, VA 22482.

Nursing students meet recruiters

Associate-degree nursing (ADN) students at Rappahannock Community College (RCC) recently attended a career fair at the Glens Campus.

Hospitals provided information about salaries, sign-on bonuses, positions available to new graduates, orientation programs and benefits, including tuition reimbursement for those who wish to work for a bachelor's in nursing while employed as a registered nurse.

Participating employers were Bon Secours Health System, Sentara Healthcare, Riverside Health System, Rappahannock General Hospital and Cumberland Hospital in New Kent County.

"They thought it was great that we offered them a very targeted group of students," said RCC job development coordinator Chuck Murray.

"The students were very excited to hear from each hospital and will be able to make a better decision about where they want to work as a result. In the future, we will expand the fair to include not just hospitals, but all health care employers," said coordinator Dr. Wendy Edson.

The turnout of about 65 included first- and second-year students. For the first-year students, the hospitals offer externships, allowing them to gain nursing experience while completing an associate degree, "which benefits both the student and the hospital," Edson noted.

Second-year students are looking for permanent jobs that will begin as soon as they pass their last classes. The recruiters urged them to apply soon for employment in the spring. The assurance that jobs are readily available "motivates them to do well in school for the last semester so they can graduate and start working," Edson said.

VIMS hosts oil and gas workshop

The Virginia Institute of Marine Science (VIMS) recently hosted a scientific workshop to determine research needs concerning potential development of Virginia's offshore oil and gas resources.

The workshop was sponsored by the U.S. Minerals Management Service (MMS), the federal agency responsible for managing oil and gas resources along the nation's outer continental shelf.

The workshop, Environmental Research Needs in Support of Potential Virginia Offshore Oil and Gas Activities, brought together some 90 scientists, economists and policymakers from throughout the U.S. to review what is currently known about the environmental resources of Virginia's continental shelf, and to identify areas where more knowledge is needed in order to make informed decisions concerning possible oil and gas development. Existing knowledge includes results from a series of continental-shelf studies undertaken by VIMS scientists in the late 1970s following the 1973 oil crisis.

Consideration of oil and gas exploration on Virginia's outer continental shelf is proceeding based on the convergence of three recent policy actions: a call for offshore gas exploration in Gov. Tim Kaine's 2007 Energy Plan, the Bush Administration's lifting this summer of an Interior Department ban on offshore leasing that was enacted in 1990, and the expiration September 30 of the Congressional ban on offshore drilling in place since 1981.

VIMS professor and workshop host Robert Diaz will collaborate with workshop participants to produce a report outlining the recommendations of five working groups. Those groups assessed current knowledge and suggested future research directions in the areas of socioeconomics, fish and fisheries, bottom-dwelling communities, geology and physical oceanography, and endangered species. The report is due to MMS in February.

The workshop report "will inform the research-planning process within our Environmental Studies Program so we can develop a suite of studies to address research needs and fill information gaps," said oceanographer Jim Cimato, head of the MMS Environmental Studies Group.

The MMS also is seeking broader public input on the potential for offshore activities in Virginia, including publication of a Call for Information and Notice of Intent to Prepare an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS), which appeared in the Federal Register November 13.

Any potential oil and gas activities in Virginia's offshore waters would begin with the sale of commercial leases in a pie-shaped area (Lease Sale 220) that begins 50 miles off the Virginia coast. The lease sale would take place no earlier than 2011.

The MMS estimates that this area may contain 130 million barrels of oil and 1.14 trillion cubic feet of natural gas. The U.S. currently uses about 20 million barrels of oil and 60 billion cubic feet of natural gas per day.

The MMS seeks comments from all interested parties concerning environmental, archaeological, socioeconomic, and geological conditions or potential conflicts that should be addressed in the EIS. Comments are due to MMS by December 29.

Flu risk rises for children

RICHMOND — Public health officials are increasingly concerned about the vulnerability of children to the flu this year.

This follows research that shows that mothers are unaware of a new recommendation from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) that adds all children between the ages of 5 and 18 years to the population that should be immunized against the flu.

"Children are most at risk for catching the flu and most at risk for spreading it. They are in highly social settings at school and with friends on a nearly continuing basis," said Virginia Health Commissioner Karen Remley, M.D.

"Due to the change in the CDC recommendation this year to include children between 5 and 18 years of age, many parents may not be aware of the importance of having school-age children vaccinated. Studies have shown that receiving a flu shot is the most effective preventive measure one can take against the flu," said Dr. Remley.

A CDC survey revealed that 41 percent of mothers with children in day care do not know that beginning at six months of age children should receive a flu shot.

Mothers said the primary reason they were unaware of the recommendation was that their doctors did not inform them about the vaccination. Infants and young children are among those most likely to be hospitalized or die from influenza or from its complications.

American Academy of Pediatrics Virginia Chapter president Robert Gunther, M.D., said flu shots are available in nearly all pediatric offices and that many offices have expanded their hours or made other accommodations to increase the availability of the vaccine.

"The influenza vaccine significantly decreases the risk of infants and young children winding up in an emergency room or the hospital with flu-related illness. School age children also can benefit from spending more time in school ready to learn," Dr. Gunther said.

Influenza is a highly contagious virus that is easily spread from person to person, especially when an infected individual coughs or sneezes. It usually comes on suddenly. Symptoms can include high fever, chills, headaches, exhaustion, sore throat, cough and all-over body aches.

"Some people say it feels like they've been hit by a truck," said Virginia Department of Health (VDH) Division of Immunization director Jim Farrell.

Symptoms also can be mild, he said.

The virus can be transmitted 24 hours before influ-

Conley Foundation celebrates 22 years

Ben D. Conley recently met with six scholarship recipients for the 2008 year. The Ben D. Conley Charitable and Educational Foundation awards scholarships to students in Lancaster and Northumberland counties on an annual basis.

The foundation was incorporated December 1, 1986, and funded by Ben D. Conley of White Stone. Conley created the foundation for the purpose of providing scholarships to qualified individuals and grants to charitable organizations in Lancaster and Northumberland counties.

From its incorporation, the foundation has provided funds to deserving students to further their education and grants to local charitable organizations. Students are urged to talk with their guidance counselors regarding the scholarships.

Conley is one of 10 children, six boys and four girls, born to James Gilliam Conley and Emily DeShields Delano Conley of Remo.

"I was the seventh child, and #7 has always been my good number," said Conley.

He served in the U.S. Army, and moved to Hyattsville, Md., upon his honorable discharge. In 1955, he moved to Annapolis, Md., and became a successful land and real estate developer. His largest project in Annapolis was the development of a 142-townhouse complex. His latest project was Fitchett's Landing in White Stone where he lives.

He has been an active participant in local projects such as being instrumental in working with other local individuals in the area to establish Rappahannock General Hospital and Rappahannock Westminster Canterbury.

Osprey Elves workshop held

Chesapeake Academy's middle school students recently paired up with lower school and early childhood students to help them make handmade Christmas gifts and decorations.

In an "Osprey Elves Workshop" designed and implemented by Chesapeake Academy Parent and Patrons Association (CAPPA), the students transformed pine cones, pipe cleaners, pom-poms, glue, glitter, lace napkins, silver balls, flour, brown sugar and chocolate chips into reindeer ornaments, hand-print Christmas trees, hot cocoa cones, decoupage candle votives, jeweled key rings, cookie mixes, and hand-painted mugs.

"We wanted to offer the children a gift-making opportunity while building the school's sense of community," said coordinator Kristy Livingston who helped organize adult helpers and gift-wrappers. "We wanted to continue the tradition started years ago by Santa's Secret Shop that lets kids keep their parents' gifts a secret until Christmas morning," she said.

Tri-Star Supermarket donated many of the baking goods. The volunteers included Stacy Jespersen, Wendy Szyperski, Kimberly Vail, Cindy Goodwin, and Connie Lee.

Preschoolers visit firehouse

Preschoolers at The Learning Center recently visited the Kilmarnock Volunteer Fire Department to learn about the importance of fire safety. The children were allowed to explore the fire trucks and find out how our local volunteers contribute to the safety of our community. The Learning Center staff emphasizes to the children the importance of community involvement and thanks firefighter Tom Jones for teaching about fire safety and helping to keep folks safe. From left are (front row) Victoria Geier, Alex Posey, Ella Posey, Morgan VerMeer, Tristan McDaniels and Stella Patton; (second row) volunteer firemen Johnny Smith and Tom Jones, Chloe Fridley, Mackenzie Bartlett, Andrew Fulmer and Jarett Platsis.

Animals for adoption

The Animal Welfare League has many animals for adoption to good, loving homes. The dogs, puppies, cats and kittens change rapidly; in lieu of listing them, interested persons may call the league at 435-0822 or Joyce at 462-0091 to be advised of what is available at that time. Visits to local animal shelters also are encouraged.

■ C.H.I.P.S. workshop

The Lancaster Primary School Curriculum at Home Involving Parents and Students (C.H.I.P.S.) program will hold a workshop at 5:30 p.m. January 12 at the LPS cafeteria.

The workshop will address ways to help children develop a better understanding of books. All Lancaster County parents and guardians of children ages 3 to 7 are invited to attend. All participants will receive a book. Dinner and childcare will be provided.

■ Tech summit

Rappahannock Community College in Warsaw recently held a technology summit "Faculty training to climb new heights." The summit attracted some 45 participants from Rappahannock, Germanna, John Tyler, Lord Fairfax and Northern Virginia community colleges, as well as Lancaster, Middlesex and Northumberland high schools.

■ Honor society

The Rappahannock Community College Warsaw Campus Alpha Lambda Omicron Chapter of the Phi Theta Kappa International Honor Society recently inducted 22 new members, including Jessica Lynn and Austin Sichol of Northumberland County.

"Phi Theta Kappa represents a group of students who want to achieve excellence. They will be the future leaders of this country," said guest speaker, Warsaw Campus academic dean Patricia Bradshaw.

■ Food drive

The Woodland Academy food drive to assist 50 area families continues. Non-perishable food donations will continue through December 19. Also, Woodland Secret Santas recently raised over $400 so that each student could provide frozen turkeys. More Secret Santas are needed.

Donations may be dropped at 2054 Neenah Road Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., and at Halls Supermarket in Colonial Beach, December 13, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

■ Nurse aides

On December 4, students attending Rappahannock Community College nurse aide program at The Orchard, completed requirements for graduation.

Soon to begin work at area health care facilities are Linda Brown, Sharon Gardner, Jessica Johnson, and Crystal Smith of Essex County; Shalita West of Lancaster County; Timeka Taylor of Middlesex County; Tina Hayden of Richmond County; and Bryiane Delano, Maura Perez, and Stephanie Treadway of Westmoreland County.

Breakfast with Santa

Berkeley Kellum, 5, hands over his presents to Donna Duerson for wrapping in Santa's workshop last Saturday. The kids' shopping area was part of the annual breakfast with Santa sponsored by the White Stone Volunteer Fire Department. Berkeley's mom, Kelly Kellum, and younger brother, Keegan Kellum, 2, offered some gift-buying advice. Santa pictures will appear next week in the Christmas edition. (Photo by Lisa Hinton-Valdighi)

Toolkits for seniors address health care

The Virginia Association of Area Agencies on Aging Senior Medicare Patrol Program (SMP), the Virginia Department for the Aging and Virginia Bureau of Insurance with support by Virginia TRIAD, Senior-Navigator and AARP Virginia recently gave toolkits for senior citizens and caregivers.

The purpose of the toolkit is to assist older adults and caregivers throughout the Commonwealth with information to make informed healthcare decisions and protect themselves from Medicare and healthcare fraud.

Each kit contains:

- Questions for beneficiaries or family members to ask salespeople.
- Facts on healthcare benefits options.
- Things to look out for when considering a healthcare plan.
- Four steps to safeguard their Medicare.
- A contact list of helpful Virginia health and consumer agencies.

The toolkits were made possible, in part, by a grant from the Administration on Aging, Department of Health and Human Services. Nationally, there are 59 SMP programs funded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services through the Administration on Aging.

Families and older adults who are interested in receiving a toolkit should contact Bay Aging.

Edmonds provided council a draft of the design for a town website, noting that it was not a "finished version." He also announced that the URL address IrvingtonVirginia.org had been purchased.

Without a formal vote, council authorized a $100 donation to Hospice of the Northern Neck in honor of Cornelia S. Terry, mother of town attorney Matt Terry, who died December 9.

Also without a formal vote, council authorized a $701 expenditure to begin work on installing new light fixtures in the town office.
