

In the days of community tomato factories, the water at nearby creeks ran red with tomato peelings. The peelings would bob in the water as schools of minnow nibbled at the red crust of the fruit. The busy-body talk of women steadily peeling and coring tomatoes would only be interrupted when a line of gals would break out in song or when shovels filled the steam boiler with coal.

It was a majestic time in Tidewater Virginia history.

cities brought commerce to the rural communities of the Northern Neck and Middle Peninsula. Fruits of the land or water in the country were transported to city markets and, in turn, goods and services came from the city.

The vegetable canning business that grew out of the steamboat era provided many jobs in a time when this area's economy was still trying to recover from the Civil War and, later, the Great Depression.

The Chesapeake Bay and the major rivers were full of creeks and coves where canning factories could be built within easy access of a steamboat landing. Some factories were built on top of steamboat docks while others were built along the shoreline, close enough for easy loading and unloading.

Steamboats would carry canned vegetables to market in Baltimore or Norfolk. At one time there were 40 tomato canning factories on the Northern Neck, and just about that many on the Middle Peninsula.

Wit Garrett of Bowlers recalls that R.G. Neal owned a tomato canning factory at Bowlers Steamboat Wharf in Essex County. Some years later Lord Mott Corporation of Baltimore took it over.

Garrett went to the factory from time to time. "There were Jack Smith and Edmond Smith tables everywhere and women would core and peel the toma-

The factory at Bowlers canned tomatoes and blackeyed peas. "People worked at the factory, but people also made money by growing tomatoes for the factories," said

"A lot of people who worked the river had little farms. They grew tomatoes and would take them to the factory to make a little spending money," he

"My uncle had a factory in they built. Dunnsville," he said. "The last one in operation on the Northern Neck was owned by the Cowarts. I think what killed them was that the health department regulations just got

"When I got out of World War II, they were still canning blackeye peas at Bowlers and we'd go down with a wagon and take away the leftover hulls and feed them to our cattle,"

Dumplin Major of Saluda would help his father haul tomatoes to the community canning factory when he was a boy in the 1930s. The earliest factory was on Urbanna Creek in the area of Boney Finger. It was later moved behind where the VDOT building in Saluda is today. Local businessmen owned the factory.

"When I was a boy there the toes," he said. "The peeled were a bunch of people peeling in the 1930s and

"There were empty cans all where they'd cook the toma-

"Tom Frazier was in charge of getting the cans stacked right in the cooker," said Major. "They used fresh water from a swamp, and they actually made a small dam to hold run-off rain water. That's where they pulled the water to operate the steampowered boiler. They used the water to generate the hot water for canning. I can remember as a boy playing on the dam that

"The steam boiler had a great big round kettle. They'd put the cans in metal crates and lower them down into the boiler. After they were canned, they'd let them cool, and then there was a crew of women who put the labels on," said Major. "That was a busy place in those days.

"My father raised tomatoes and we were living right where the new courthouse in Saluda is now," he said. "When the factory was on the creek, I remember going down to the factory on a wagon loaded with tomatoes and pulled by mules.

"There was a big hill we had to go down to get to the factory. Daddy had to chain the wheel of the wagon so it wouldn't go down too fast or we might turn over," he said.

Major said "that hill" and transportation

The Irvington Steamboat Era Museum has an excellent display of a steamboat dock with boxes of canned tomatoes ready to be shipped.

Many of the brand names provided a clue as to where canning factories were located. Nomini Brand tomatoes were packed by Neenah Packing Co. near Nomini and Montross, and Kinsale had its own Pride of Kinsale packed by Parks Bros.

The Kilmarnock Packing Company labeled its cans "Ripe Pack." Peeled, raw tomatoes were put in cans; the cans were sealed with a top; the canned tomatoes were boiled in a large kettle; allowed to cool; and then labels were put on by hand or by machine. Tomato labels are now collectables and many people have them framed to hang on their walls.

53 >> 1940s from steamboats and sailing schooners to trucks persuaded the Smiths to move their factory into town and off the water.

"The man who ran the factory was Earl Redd of Essex County. He would board with us," said Major. "Mama would feed him. The factory did not run on weekends, so Redd county." would go home to Essex.

"It was right good for us. We could grow and sell our tomatoes and get money from the manager staying at our house," he said. "It was a big deal in of its own tomatoes. Major Saluda in those days and we recalls that a Lord Mott truck motor-powered buyboats that

In the 1930s, Lord Mott enough workers to pick the beans and tomatoes. "They'd haul them in and haul them side of Urbanna. It was a large out. Most of the pickers were to Taber Park, which today is black women," he said.

He noted the firm had large had quite a few factories in the went to King and Queen and hauled tomato cans and ingredients from Baltimore, and the finished product to Baltimore. "By then the steamboat had stopped and the buyboats had taken over. There were still a few sailing schooners hauling canned tomatoes to Baltimore into the 1940s."

The last of the canning factories closed in the 1960s, which marked the end of a colorful era on the Northern Neck and Middle Peninsula.

The steamboat dock (above) on Jackson Creek in Deltaville had a canning factory along the shore. Steamboats brought cans and ingredients from Baltimore and would haul finished canned products to Baltimore on the return trip.

Tomato currency: Tokens

rom the 1830s to the 1950s, the U.S. Mint had competition from country stores, oyster shucking houses, tomato canning factories, and coal and lumber yards. Many of these businesses legally made their own form of money through tokens and vouchers.

Many Middle Peninsula and Northern Neck tomato factory owners used tokens to not only pay workers but to keep track of the amount of work done at their plants. Today, these tokens are collectables.

The primary era of tokens was in the days of steamboats. In those days Baltimore was the center of commerce around the Chesapeake Bay. Steamboats were coming from and going to Baltimore from numerous bay communities. Merchants and owners of canning factories would go to Baltimore to purchase goods for their stores and have their tokens made.

Elvin Miller of Topping has collected tokens for over 30 years and has one of the most extensive Virginia collections in existence. "The tokens nouses, tomato canries, and coal and

rds. Many of these were very inexpensive to have made," said Miller. "The do business and would have

were there."

Many of the tomato canning houses had their own sailing schooners or they employed schooners to go to Baltimore to carry loads of canned tomatoes to market. On the return trip, the schooners would bring a shipment of empty cans to be filled at the factory. Usually, the owners of these plants would go to and from Baltimore on the schooners and take care of their business, which often included having tokens made.

In tomato canning and oyster shucking houses, piecemeal labor was used and tokens were an easy way to keep track of the amount of work produced. For instance, in the tomato factories, tomato pickers and peelers were given a token for every bushel picked or bucket peeled.

Many local tomato factory owners also owned an oyster shucking house and a general mercantile store where the tokens could be exchanged for goods.

J.W. Hurley and Son in Urbanna is an example of such a factory. Tokens were given out to pickers, peelers and shuckers, and the workers could either spend their tokens at the company store or turn them in for cash. If a tomato or oyster house didn't have a store, the tokens were just turned in for money.

Female workers peeled and cored the warmed tomatoes and received about 3 or 4 cents worth of tokens per bucketful, said Miller.

"There were literally hundreds of tomato factories in the state of Virginia and a dozen or more in Middlesex County," said Miller.

Miller has tokens from the Grinels family of Wake and Bushy in Middlesex County. The Grinels family had several factories, oyster houses and stores. One was Major Parker Grinels and son at Stampers.

Miller also has tokens from the A.E. Segar factory and store at Locklies in Middlesex County.

THE PROCESS

- Fireman started the boilers at 5 a.m. As soon as the steam was made the whistle blew calling workers from their homes to the cannery.
- 2 After scalding "peelers" removed core and peelings from tomatoes using a knife. Each inspected bucket of peeled tomatoes received a token.
- 3 Cans were hand packed, water added and sealed using a blow torch and solder.
- 4 Sealed cans were placed in metal cages, "process kettles" and cooked in boiling water 30-110 minutes depending on can size.
- 5 Cans were air cooled and later hand labeled using a crude board, paste and printed labels
 - Canned tomatoes were packe and shipped via steamboats major ports of Baltimore at Norfolk to around the work

The Steamboat Era Museum in Irvington has this tomato processing schedule on display.

Tomato factories:

'That's where all the fun was'

uby Lee Norris of Topping started her professional life as a tomato peeler but went on to become a well-known school teacher and a member of the Board of Governors at the University of Mary Washington in Fredericksburg.

In 1927, Norris, at 12 years of age, got her first job at E.B. Wood & Brothers Tomato Packing house at Lot in Middlesex County. Today, Lot is known as Hartfield.

For most folks their first job results in being paid with silver or paper money, but Norris' first paycheck came in the form of tokens.

The packing house had an agreement with several local general merchandise stores in that community. Store tokens were paid and the packing house would reimburse store owners in cash for the amount of tokens spent at their store.

"When I was a child there were four tomato factories in Wake and one in Hartfield," said Norris. "There was one or two near Urbanna and there was Daniels in Deltaville.

Although E. B. Wood & Brothers only canned tomatoes, some factories also canned herring, herring roe (eggs) and string beans. "The factories were me going but I would beg to go. real important to this area," said Norris. "Those were Depression times and money was tight for

"I'd peel tomatoes [with a knife] and drop the meat into a bucket. The tomatoes would come to me in a wire basket and I'd get five cents worth of tokens for every basket I'd peel," she said. "I could peel seven or eight baskets in a day, which was 35 or 40 cents a day, and that was a pretty good day's work for a kid."

At that time, there was a federal child labor law that kept children under the age of 14 from working. "Mr. Wood knew about the law and if an inspector came, there was a signal for all us children to run as fast as we could to get out of the building," said Norris.

"We were told to grab our glove, knife, bucket and stool and run. (Peelers used one glove on the hand that held the tomato.) The inspectors came several times when I was there, but we never got caught," she

"It was against the law for children to work in the factory but most of the kids in the area worked there," said Norris. "Mama and Daddy didn't want I had to go because everyone in the neighborhood was going and that's where all the fun was."

The law changed in 1935 to allow all children to work.

Norris later taught school for 37 years. She taught at Kilmarnock High School, Urbanna School, Middlesex High School, Foxhill School and several high schools in the Richmond area.

In her last job in Richmond, she taught at a humanities center. There she wrote and edited three textbooks. After World War II, she also organized and administered a private high school in Philadelphia under the G.I. Bill of Rights. The school was for veterans returning from the war.

Since retiring, Norris has taken on yet another profession. She is an accomplished photographer, writer and journalist. Her works have appeared in numerous regional magazines and she specializes in garden and local history stories.

Norris graduated from Mary Washington College and earned her master's degree in humanities from the University of Rich-

Fruit or vegetable?

The red juicy tomato was the subject of a U.S. Supreme Court case in 1883. The court had to decide whether it was a vegetable or a fruit.

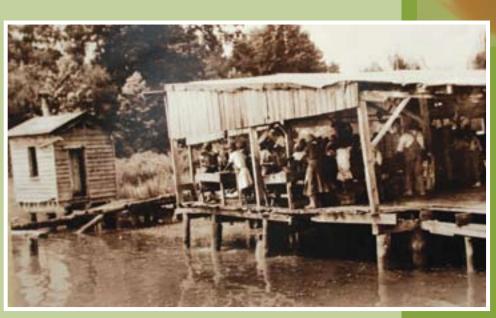

In response to a growing international trade, the U.S. Congress passed the Tariff Act of 1883 that required a 10 percent tax on imported vegetables.

John Nex, a tomato importer, contended there should be no tariff on tomatoes because they were a fruit, not a vegetable, and the debate made it all the way to the Supreme Court.

The Nix vs. Hedden court decision of 1893 ruled in favor of tomato being a vegetable. "Botanically speaking, tomatoes are fruits of the vine, just as cucumbers, squashes, beans and peas," the decision stated. "But in common language of the people . . . all these are vegetables, which are grown in kitchen gardens, and which, whether eaten cooked or raw, are, like potatoes, carrots, parsnips, turnips, beets, cauliflower, cabbage, celery and lettuce, usually served at dinner in, with or after the soup, fish or meats which constitute the principal part of the repast, and not, like fruits generally, as dessert."

Many of the early tomato packing plants were built on the water. After a day's work, the water was red from tomato peelings that were dropped overboard. At one time, there were 40 tomato canning factories similar to the one above on the Northern Neck.

CoCoMo's offers a taste of Key West

by Deborah Haynes

ff the Florida Keys," goes the song by the Beach Boys, "there's a place called Kokomo. That's where you wanna go, to get away from it all."

I'm thinking this is the tune that was running through CoCoMo's owner Barry Miller's mind when he decided to open a restaurant at Deltaville in Middlesex County a few years ago.

Miller has modeled his restaurant after the breezy, beachy eateries all along U.S. 1 in the Florida Keys, CoCoMo's serves up savory seafood specialties seven days a week.

and enjoy the good food and great views.

We ventured out to visit CoCoMo's on a gorgeous Saturday afternoon a few weeks ago. We looked forward to visiting the lovely bay village of Deltaville, with its friendly folks who always take time to chat and share information about current goings-on around town.

CoCoMo's (Where Summer Never Ends) is situated on Broad Creek at 1134 Timberneck Road. In good weather, diners are given a choice of seating inside or out. "Outside, please," we told CoCoMo's pleasant hostess Jennaka.

Walking through the inside dining areas, on our way out to the deck, we enjoyed the tropical, nautical atmosphere. Palm tree murals are painted on the walls, T-shirts from famous Key West restaurants hang from the rafters in the bar, and island music plays gently in the background. Other decorative touches include painted oars hanging from the ceiling, a nameboard from Miller's grandfather's boat "Miss Helen," and brass ship's lights throughout.

There is a view of the water from almost every seat in the inside dining areas, and it's easy to get the feeling you're in a ship's wheelhouse.

A beautiful breeze was blowing out over Broad Creek during our time on CoCoMo's deck. The deck's colorful flags and umbrellas caught the wind and looking out over the waterfront was delightful.

If you have a boat, half the fun of going to CoCoMo's is getting there. While we sat on the deck, there was a steady stream of boat arrivals. Dockage is free while dining and there's no extra charge for the view.

Our server was Summer (appropriate!). In answer to my question as to what time of day the menu changes from lunch to dinner, she explained there is only one menu for all hours, and that the specials change daily. CoCoMo's summer hours are Monday through Thursday 4 to 9 p.m., Friday and Saturday 11 a.m. to 10 p.m., and Sunday 11 a.m. to 9 p.m.

I ordered a Corona with a lime slice and Summer left us to look over the menu. The appetizers, soups and salads were tempting, especially the Chesapeake Crab Dip at $10.95, Coconut Shrimp at $9.95, Bacon Wrapped Scallops at $11.95, and the bowl of Shrimp and Crab Bisque for $5.95. But we bypassed the starters ($4-$14) and went straight to the main dish.

Even though there is a Filet Mignon entree, the choices on CoCoMo's menu and into Key West, that invite visitors to come casual are predominately seafood and include shrimp. scallops, clams, fish, crab and oysters. Entree prices start at $11 and top out around $26.

> We were both hungry for a good sandwich. and considered some of the choices of fish, oyster, chicken and steak sandwiches, which run from $9 to $12.

Always in search of the perfect cheeseburger, my husband chose the CoCoMo Burger topped with Swiss cheese and Chesapeake Blue Crabmeat ($9.95). Served with all the garnishes anyone could want on a burger and a large side of really tasty French fries, all it took was a bottomless glass of iced tea to make him think he was in Paradise!

I opted for seafood and ordered the Crabcake Sandwich ($11.95). Also served with an array of garnishes and those very good fries, the large crabcake on a soft Kaiser roll was not overly breaded and was nicely spiced with Old Bay. I was pleased with my choice!

We decided we would return another day to sample the desserts, which include Key Lime Pie (of course!), Strawberry Cheesecake, a Brownie Sundae and one selection with the intriguing name of Chocolate Frenzy. Dessert selections start at Thanks, Cocomo's, for offering up such a fun place to visit! For just a while, we were transported to that latitude that's good for the attitude, and we'll be back for another visit to Deltaville's own little slice of Paradise!

Westmoreland Players rehearse summer comedy

The Westmoreland Players recently announced its summer dinner theater production, Neil Simon's "Plaza Suite," will open August 7 at the Westmoreland Players Theater in Callao.

The production is a comedy in three acts. Each act is a play in itself. Each act has its own cast and director.

Act One is directed by veteran Brian Tilbury. The cast includes Alan Campbell and Julia Tilley. Jay Croxton and David Furrow return as the waiter and the bellhop. Newcomer Holly Harmon completes the cast.

Act Two is directed by Jason Strong and Chad Lewis. Bill Perry will return following a long hiatus. Meredith Furrow will make her debut.

Act Three is directed by Joanne Cox. The cast includes Mickey Robertson and newcomer Marcia Leddy. Erin Martin and Furrow also will appear.

There will be eight performances from August 7 through 17. Four will be dinner theater shows. Call 549-9435.

Hurricane season is officially here until November 30. Be prepared! Flood insurance needs to be a part of your plan. Flood insurance takes 30 days to go into effect, so

Welcome to Northumberland County

■ Size: 222 square miles ■ Shoreline: 556 miles

■ Population: 12,400

History

orthumberland County was originally known as Chickacoan, an Indian district on the Northern Neck between the Rappahannock and Potomac rivers, tributaries of the Chesapeake Bay.

Presumably settled by the English in 1640, Northumberland was officially established by an act of the Burgesses in Jamestown in 1648. It was later divided into three additional counties. Lancaster, Richmond Westmoreland Counties.

At its heart is Heathsville, the county seat. In 1992, the National Register of Historic Places designated Heathsville as an Historic District, along with the original courthouse and tavern, now an operating restaurant, gift shop and museum.

Northumberland was once dependent upon tobacco as its major cash crop and currency. Later, most of its residents relied on the water for their livelihoods. The quaint fishing village of Reedville, with its "Millionaire's Row" of Victorian homes remains a tribute to the area's heritage and the Reedville Fisherman's Museum provides a comprehensive overview of the village's fishing industry, both past and current.

With more than 220 miles of scenic Don't Miss... shoreline, Northumberland's rustic atmosphere has lured many urbanites. So much so, that in recent years, Northumberland's population has been changing from that of full-time ber/. residents to one of many weekenders, vacationers and

The restored skipjack Claud W. Somers sets sail from the Reedville Fishermen's Museum at 10 a.m. every other Saturday. The next trips are August 9 and August 23. Reservations are required. Call the museum at 453-6529.

Rivah Fishing

Flounder, croaker fishing remain strong

by Capt. Billy Pipkin

Fishing remains good in the lower and middle bay with diverse opportunities available for the in-shore anglers and those fishing bay waters. Water temperatures have leveled recently and continue to bounce around the 80-degree mark.

Fishing has afforded more diversity, although to partake in it requires some travel as catches are spread throughout the region.

Flounder fishing has been going well over the past two weeks. Fishing efforts have been heavy in the buoy 42 area where anglers are finding 16to 27-inch specimens on each outing. Creel limits have been attained by several anglers. Drifting large strips of squid, flounder belly or spot filets have been enticing bites in that area. Some anglers prefer to troll very slowly with a bottom bumper rig. Fish finder rigs are also a popular choice among flounder fishermen. They allow fish the necessary time to take the bait deep for a more solid hook set. I recommend using a wide bend Kahle hook which is less likely to be shaken free.

The lower bay near the bridge tunnel remains a place for the large flounder. Catches are not always consistent in that area, yet the fish are running larger there. In the past, I have had good luck using whole squid to entice "only those fish worthy of catching," the big bait, big fish theory. You may even want to try that theory up in the bay waters. I do know that drifting live tiny spot also works well for the flatties.

Bluefish action remains very good on the S.W. Middle Grounds. There have been specimens up to 6 pounds landing in the coolers up there. A large Taylor blue is prime for smoking on the grill. Try slapping a few filets on the smoker with a little dry rub and peppercorn seasoning. If you don't have a smoker, my friend Rick at Savannah Joe's will be glad to toss it on the smoker for a nominal fee. Believe me, smoked bluefish is well worth your efforts. It may not leave you lickin' your eyebrows like a good rack of ribs, but you will find yourself digging into it with enthusiasm.

My mad quest for fish in the bay

by Douglas M. Nabhan

"90% of the fish are caught by 10% percent of the fishermen." I am not in that 10%. In fact, I am in the lowest quartile ing supplies, I have to walk of the 90% that catch only 10% every time I am out fishing and someone on my boat said, "How come I never catch any fish when I am with you?" I would be a very rich man.

The truth of the matter is in the bay. As anyone will tell you, a whole lot of stuff has to be right. The weather, the tide, on me, the only part of my pier the drift, the time of day, the that was hurt in the hurricane bait, the rig, the presentation of was my fish cleaning station. the bait, poles, line, hooks, and I guess it was God's way of chum. The list is endless. You saying, "He doesn't need this cannot just stick anything on anyway."

the end of a line and flop it in to bite.

Whenever I go to J&W Seapast the fish that are on sale exact same place my wife will be shopping the minute I set out to go fishing. When I first started fishing, my wife would come running out the dock to "see the catch." Now she does already bought our fish.

The expression goes that the water and expect a flounder from Indiana out to The Cell to spadefish. I got everything right by that clown!" The fish then go flounder fishing. We get out there and everyone is anchored food in Deltaville to get fish- fishing for spadefish. That's typical for me. I had come out for flounder. It would have been of the fish. If I had a nickel for for consumption. This is the a good day for flounder fishing but for the 10-knot drift, which meant you could almost water ski behind my boat the current was moving so fast. A barracuda could not have caught our bait that day. When I arrived that it is not easy to catch fish not even ask, because she has home, my neighbor asked me why I had not used my sea In some sort of cruel joke anchor, which I thought was some kind of a joke.

The next day I took them to

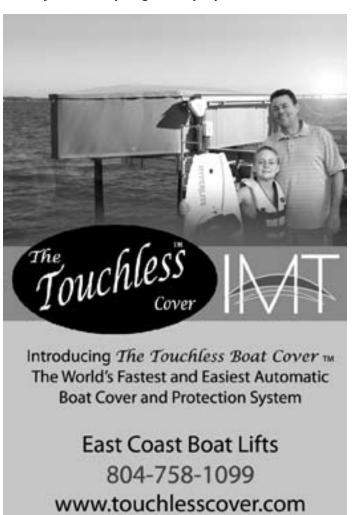

Recently, I took two friends Wolftrap to once again try for said, "I am not getting caught except for the bait. I forgot to buy "clam lips." Apparently, spadefish will only eat the lips of a clam. It is a good thing that no one was catching anything with or without clam lips.

> One time out on the "Miss Linda," I actually had a large spadefish on the line. I was so excited I was already seeing my picture in the Southside Sentinel holding up that big fish and everyone calling me "Captain" and patting me on the back. Then, I swear, the fish came to the surface and saw who was bluefish caught and released on the other end of the line and in 5 hours of fishing. They had high-tailed it for the nearest anchor line and broke the line.

My secretary told me that her husband drove 15 miles to a favorite fishing spot in the middle of the Bay. The guy who was responsible for the bait brought shrimp as bait. It is not that shrimp is not good bait, but it would be like serving corn dogs for dinner to someone from Lancaster County-you have to serve them something that they have seen before.

My wife knows that my life dream is to catch a huge flounder or a citation anything. I would take a citation blowfish if I could just have a week's worth of bragging rights.

Last week my good neighbor, Bill, came over and pulled out a picture of him holding a citation flounder. It was beautiful. It was huge. I was jealous. I have sat at The Cell on countless days turning my skin into shoe leather just praying that accidentally a flounder would have mercy on me and accidentally bite on something I sent down there.

I have bought every possible color and rig that Captain Gillie has sold. He started giving me "frequent fishing points," based on the number of flounder rigs I bought from him. I am not giving up. I am one day.

'Honest thief' leaves money in crab pot

by Larry S. Chowning

Middlesex County commercial crabbers Jimmy Hogge and Brian Brooks learned this summer that there is such a thing as an honest thief.

Hogge and Brooks were fishing crab pots Monday, July 7 in about 20 feet of water when they pulled up a crab pot, anticipating a mess of crabs. To their surprise, the pot contained no crabs. Instead, there was a jar of money in the pot.

"We were fishing pots off Aberdeen Creek on the York River," said Hogge. "We were making right good time and I looked and saw the pot come up with a jar inside.

fished my pot and left me five dollars. I was pleased and we moved on."

Chesapeake Bay commercial crabbers often have problems with people fishing their pots, especially on holiday weekends. "It was July 4th weekend and we suspected we'd lose some crabs from people fishing our pots," said Hogge.

When Hogge and Brooks started for home after fishing all their pots, they realized the honest thief had left $50 in the jar, not $5, for the number of crabs they took out of the pot.

"After I counted out the $50, I took my hat off, waved it in the air in hopes that whoever took my crabs and left the money just might be looking," said Hogge.

"We've lost a lot of crabs from people fishing our pots, but I've never had anyone leave any money—not in the 53 years I've been working the water,"

Turkey Shoot adds wooden boat race

For the first time, the Hospice Turkey Shoot Regatta will include a separate race for wooden sailboats. Most such boats were built before fiberglass became the usual material of choice. Some wooden classics that race in the Turkey Shoot date from the 1920's or earlier.

The wooden boat race will take place on October 12. The race will be a pursuit race in which handicaps are taken up front and the boats race to be first across the finish line. The winner of the wooden boat race will receive the Wobbly Compass Trophy, sponsored by Riverside Health System.

The name of the new trophy was inspired by Lee Williams who was the first three-time winner of the Turkey Shoot. In 1996, his first year, he showed up at the start line on Saturday without a compass to help in finding the first turning mark. Nevertheless, he won his class. The second day Williams brought a small pocket compass that was not damped with liquid to prevent the needle from flip flopping about and which was useless on a rocking sailboat. However, he won his class again and became the overall winner of the

In addition to having the winning boat's name engraved on the Wobbly Compass Trophy, the winner of the wooden boat race will receive a credit of $500 towards a new sail from Ulman Sails in Deltaville.

The Turkey Shoot Regatta, which is for classic sailboats, is held on the Rappahannock River with the shore-based events at Yankee Point Mariana.

The general eligibility standard for participating in the regatta is that the boat be built Museum quilters and needlers to a design that is 25 years old. Thus for the 2008 regatta the design must be from 1983 or earlier. The eligibility criterion for the Sunday wooden boat race is that the design must be of 1965 or earlier.

To register for the regatta, call Karen needlers to discover the ful-Knull at 462-7018, or visit hospiceturkeyshootregatta.com.

The Beijing Olympics

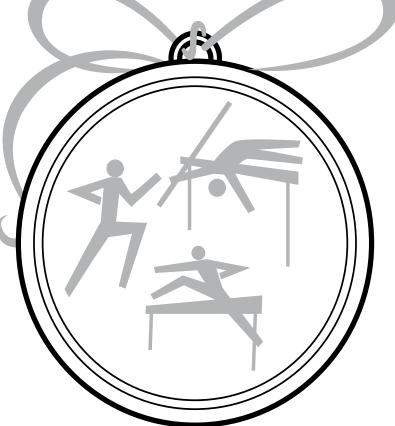

- Fun facts about the Olympics

- The Greeks held their first games in 776 B.C. in Olympia.
- The 2008 Olympic games will begin in Beijing, China with the opening ceremonies on 8-8-08 beginning at 8:8:08 pm
- Beijing is China's second largest city, after Shanghai.

 It is a city in northern China and the capital of the People's Republic of China.
- The Olympic flag contains five rings on a white background. The rings are blue, yellow, black, green and red. The rings represent the five significant continents of the world and are connected together to show the friendship to be gained at the Olympics. The colors were chosen because at least one of the colors appears on the flag of every country in the world.
- Like the Five Olympic Rings from which they draw their color and inspiration, Fuwa will serve as the Official Mascots of Beijing 2008 Olympic Games, carrying a message of friendship, peace and good wishes to children all over the world. The five Fuwa also have characteristics of four of China's most popular animals -- the Fish, the Panda, the Tibetan Antelope, the Swallow -- and the Olympic Flame.

ndians had occupied the Northern Neck for some 10,000 years when Capt. John Smith sailed up the Rappahannock River in 1608. The Powhatan Confederate was represented here by the Moraughtacunds and the Cuttatawomen tribes. A short 43 years later, Lancaster County was formed from neighboring Northumberland.

Families of notable influence in the social, political and economic climate of the colonies built magnificent "empires" here, and family names like Carter and Ball still are prevalent today.

Robert "King" Carter (1663-1732) of Corrotoman was the son of the immigrant John Carter, who acquired property and lived at Corrotoman from 1654 until his death in 1669.

At the time of his death, his holdings had increased to some 300,000 acres, and over 1,000 slaves were working his various plantations. There were 18 buildings on the estate then (not counting the Mansion House he built, which burned three years prior to his death).

Married twice, he had 15 children. Among King Carter's descendants were eight governors of Virginia, three signers of the Declaration of Indepentice Edward D. White.

The building had been the scene in 1774 of the trial and sentencing to jail of four Baptist ministers for "preaching and expounding the Scriptures contrary to law."

Essex County Courthouse

Built in 1848 to replace the old courthouse, now Beale Memorial Baptist Church. A 1926 renovation added a bell St. John's Episcopal Church and clock tower. It is on Prince St. in Tappahannock and has long contained the largest portrait collection in the county.

Essex County Museum and Historical Society

Newly expanded, the Essex County Museum is located in downtown Tappahannock and surrounded by historic buildings. The expansion included the opening of the "Carl D. Silver Gallery," another smaller gallery, an expanded gift shop, a reference room, a document storage room, and handicap accessible restrooms.

Currently on display is the "Homespun Treasures: Quilts, Coverlets and Textiles" exhibit. Wonderful examples of simple to intricate styles of this art form will take you back in time. This exhibit will be on display through the summer. Additional exhibits of interest continue on display, such as "From Sandlot to Semipro: Baseball in Essex County," which follows the story of America's pastime in the county from just after the Civil War to present day. The museum also houses the "Shelling of Camden" diorama, a miniature 4'x 8' recreation of the Rappahannock Civil War engagement. Continuing museum exhibits include prehistoric fossils, Native American and colonial artifacts, and items from the American Revolution, Bacon's Rebellion, the Civil War and World Wars I and II.

The museum is located at 218 Water Ln. and is open free of charge daily (except for Wed.) from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Sun. 1-3 p.m. Call 443-4690 for more information or visit us online at www.ecmhs.

One family had six sons in active duty. Many were wounded and reported missing or killed in action.

"The Good Old Days" exhibit will resume in July. "The Good Old Days" features numerous artifacts and memorabilia depicting the lifestyle of those who lived in Gloucester many years ago. Visitors will be reminded that their ancestors milked their own cows, churned their own butter, cranked ice cream in a wooden bucket-like freezer, cut their own firewood, made bread, lived at night by lamplight, walked behind horses and mules to plow the fields to raise vegetables, corn and feed for the animals.

Children's games were different then as was the social life of their parents and grandparents. The exhibit will close September 29.

Permanent exhibits include Native American artifacts dating to 800 B.C., copies of a 1655 land gift from an Indian tribe, artifacts from the Old Free School House (ca. 1676), Civil War relics, and items from Hotel Botetourt, an Old Country Store and the Bank of Gloucester.

The museum is open Mon. -Fri. from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. and Sat. from 11 to 4 p.m. Call 693-1234 or 693-2659. Admission is free.
